

Submission 50 – Benjamin Reynolds

The current drone laws are good and strict enough. No commercial aircraft should be coming low enough to be an issue with a recreational drone if it is not above a correct height, and if they are then they are breaking the rules too for public safety. No one will comply with any remote id rules unless they are doing their work commercially and everyone else will just keep flying as they always have for decades for fun and not give two [REDACTED] about your rules. This will be a waste of infrastructure and money.
