

Submission 60 – David Churchill

I would like to request that there be a clear distinction made between drones and radio controlled scale model aircraft. The two have vastly different flight characteristics and capabilities.

Drones have created problems from very early in the period that they have been around.

Radio controlled Scale models have been around for well over 50 years and have an excellent safety record.

It would be inappropriate to place them in the same category as drones.