Remote ID should only apply to drones designed for certain use cases, or over a certain weight

-I believe any drone over 1kg should require Remote ID, anything under that should be exempt

-Freestyle drones/drones designed for fun, and low/park flying should be exempt as they are not a threat to public safety of privacy. They're not designed to spy on people in their back yards, they're designed to be small and nimble, to do tricks around soccer goals at the park (for example)

-Requiring remote ID on smaller drones will destroy the hobby for many, as a Remote ID module adds weight, complexity, and cost to what may be small and cheap drones

-Camera drones on the other hand such as those from DJI should require Remote ID. Camera drones are not generally small or nimble, but weigh more and have the ability to record high definition video, some drones even having zoom capabilities.
