

Submission 138 – Jesse Gray

I stance on remote id is against. I see not benefit of the general public being able to access my location while conducting operations. This leaves me open to adverse effects while in possession of expensive equipment.

Further more like all laws this only will be followed by those of don't and won't cause issue. And those who do not care for following an rules will ignore and work around the remote id meaning those who wish to do the wrong thing will continue to do so
