Submission 15 - Zoltan Somogyi

The article published in The Conversation at https://theconversation.com/when-it-comes-to-delivery-drones-the-government-is-selling-us-a-pipe-dream-experts-explain-the-real-costs-195361 is a fairly thorough exploration of the main problems posed by drone deliveries, and I agree with all its points. With the exception of delivering life-saving products such as medicines that cannot be delivered in time any other way, I strongly oppose having a selfish, lazy minority impose extra noise, the safety risks of malfunctioning drones, or the privacy risks of maliciously programmed drones on the rest of the population.
