

Submission 27 – Jack Mann

There is no reason to even consider using drones to deliver fast food in our society. So many people eat far too much junk food now, without making it easier to source. There is an absolute necessity for drones in emergency, industrial, agricultural, public safety situations. I'm sure there are many others as well, such as defense.

To give up our skies to junk food delivery drones or drones from the likes of Amazon or Kogan is dangerous precedent.
