

Submission 75 – Summerflies

Brisbane residents are already suffering horrendously from aeroplane noise and having drones buzzing around doing inane deliveries of coffees and pizzas. Is there really such a dire need to have things buzzing around at low levels. They will be a distraction for drivers, what happens when they drop something? People will try to shoot them down, what if they drop on someones house/car/person.... who is liable for the damage? It a testament to lazy, entitled, more dollars than sense people who will want to use it and someone wanting to make their fortune from something novelty. Just like the scooters littering our streets and being a nuisance to people in so many different ways.
